English Mood Academy

yellow = new words red = concession words

Nour is a Sec.2 student who loves history. One evening, a colorized photo of old Cairo is trending on her phone. Although it looks real, Nour feels something is wrong.

The post makes a big claim: "This tower was built in one night!" It is full of nostalgia and pride, and it has already accumulated a million likes. Its virality is remarkable.

The post is very emotional and uses extreme, exaggerated words. It provokes strong reactions from the public. Despite this, nobody gives a source.

"Media literacy matters," says her teacher, Mr. Karim. "Media literacy means you verify before you share. Accuracy should be your first priority."

Nour decides to prioritize the truth. She visits the city archive and consults a qualified historian, Dr. Hoda.

Dr. Hoda gives a measured, detailed answer. "The construction took six years, not one night. That's a myth. It's a long process." However, the fake post is still spreading rapidly.

"Was it a deliberate lie?" Nour asks. "Maybe," says Dr. Hoda. "Some pages distort facts to promote engagement. The scale of misinformation online is huge."

Nour learns to distinguish facts from opinions and to look at each story from a different perspective. Careful questioning helps her find what is accurate.

She posts a correction with real dates. "Don't risk your name," she writes. "Sharing lies has consequences." The story unfolds in a new direction.

Her post becomes significant. Every citizen can help, she says, if they consistently check the truth. In spite of the fake page, the truth wins in the end!

The End 📱

Verify before you share: virality doesn't mean truth.

اتأكد قبل ما تشير: الانتشار مش معناه إن الكلام صح.
