After the storm, Ferdinand lived as Prospero's prisoner on the island. Prospero gave him a hard task: he had to carry a thousand heavy logs. Ferdinand obeyed, because he was thinking of Miranda.

Miranda saw him working in the hot sun. "Please rest," she said. "Let me carry the logs for you!" Ferdinand smiled. "She is ten times more gentle than her father," he thought.

"What is your name?" Ferdinand asked. Her father had said, "Don't tell him!" But Miranda told him. She revealed her secret without thinking: "My name is Miranda."

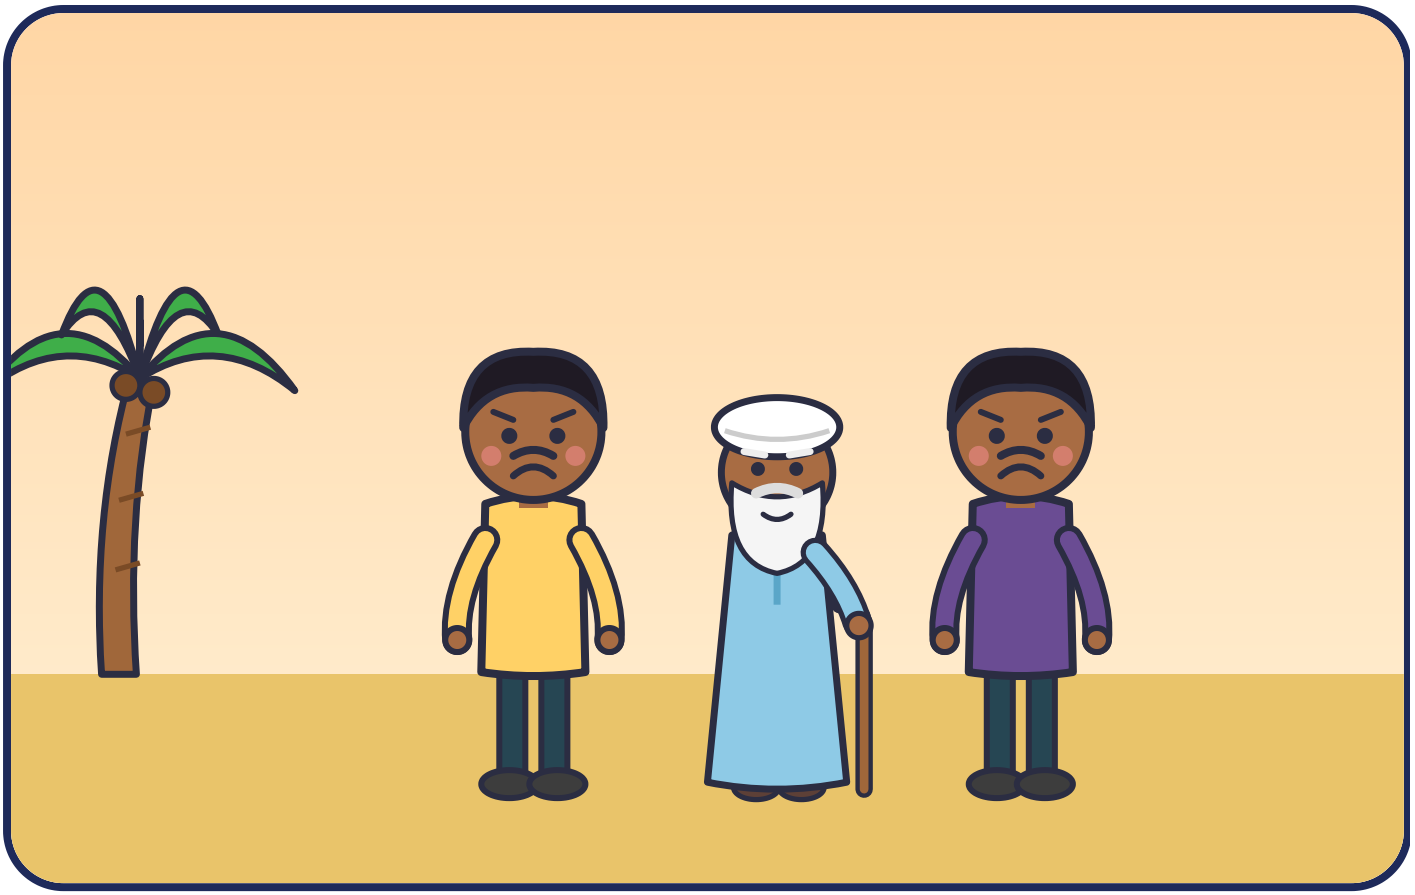

"I don't know any other women," Miranda said. "I only know my own face in the mirror. But I don't want any companion in the world but you." Ferdinand promised to marry her.

Prospero watched them from behind the trees. He was happy, because his test worked. "Ferdinand is good and honest," he said. "He will have my daughter's hand in marriage."

In another part of the island, Caliban met two drunk sailors from the ship. He made a plot with them to kill Prospero and take the island. But Ariel heard every word.

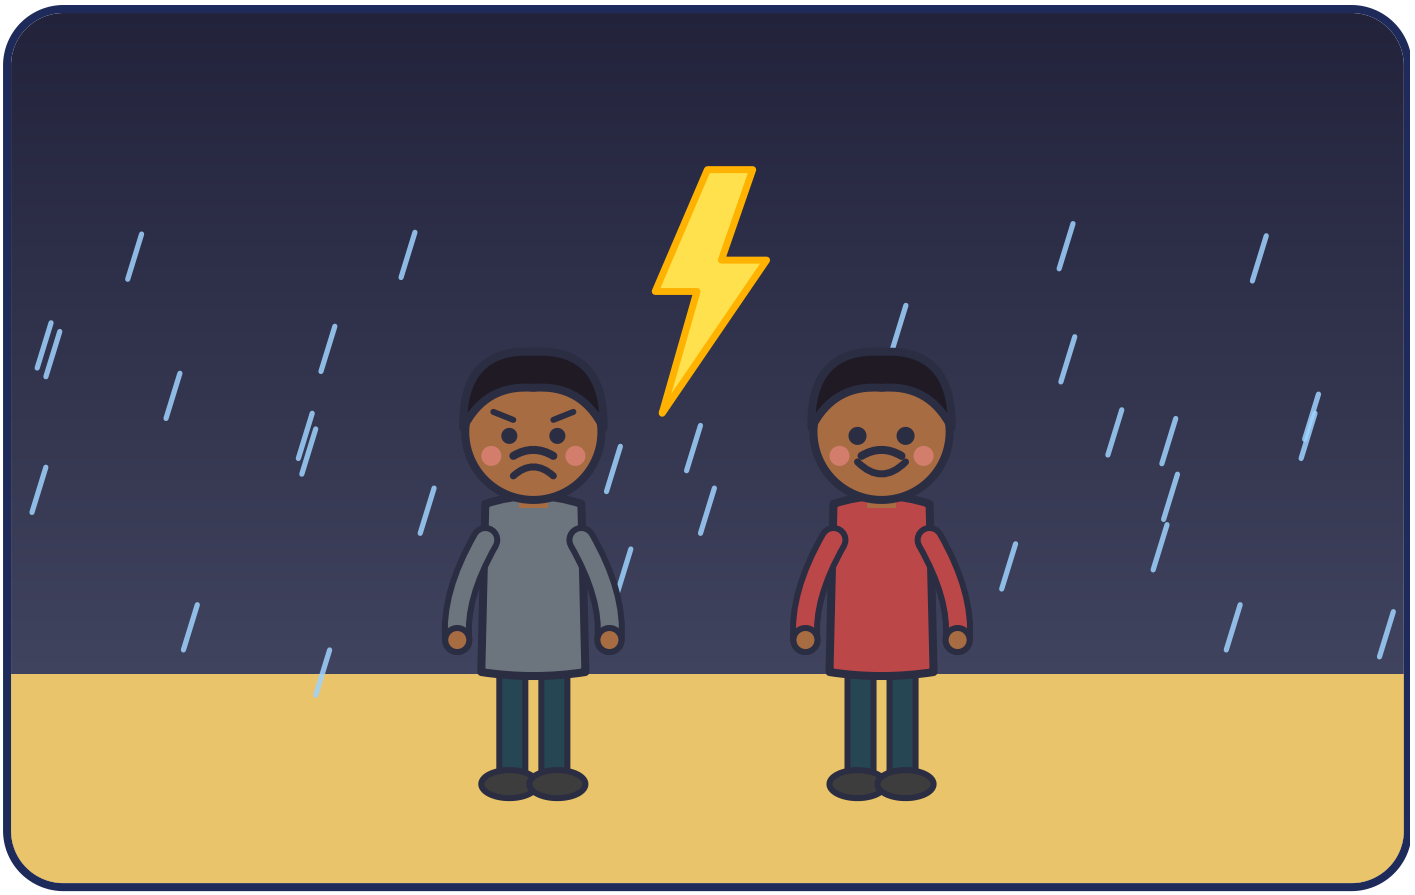

Far away, King Alonso, Gonzalo and Antonio walked for hours. They were exhausted and hungry. Alonso was desperate. "My son Ferdinand is dead," he cried. "I have lost all hope."

Suddenly, they heard strange music. Magic spirits brought a big feast and put it in front of the nobles. "Food!" said Gonzalo. "This island is full of wonders!"

But before they could eat, thunder shook the sky. Ariel appeared as a terrible harpy with big wings, and the food disappeared in one moment!

"You are three men of sin!" Ariel shouted. "You took Milan from Prospero, so the sea punished you and took your son." Antonio pulled out his sword.

"Put away your sword," Ariel said. "It is useless against me. I am like the force of nature that brought you here." Then Ariel flew away into the sky.

Alonso felt terrible guilt. "They are both desperate," Gonzalo said quietly. "Guilt has entered their blood like poison." Prospero smiled. His plan was working.
