yellow = new words red = verbs in the past

Laila wanted to be an astronomer. Every night, she looked at the sun's family of planets in her book.

One day, her uncle Omar visited her. He was an astronomer too! He showed her a model of a space probe.

"A space probe has no people inside," he said. "It travels far and sends information back to Earth."

Laila asked, "Why doesn't the probe fly away from Earth?" Uncle Omar smiled. "Gravity pulls everything towards the earth."

Then he drew a big circle around the sun. "This is the Earth's orbit. The Earth moves around the sun on this path."

He cut an orange in half. "Look at the middle. That is the core. The Earth has a hot core too."

"How big is the Earth?" Laila wanted to know. He drew a line across the circle. "This line is the diameter."

They looked at the moon through a telescope. Its surface had many craters, big holes made by rocks hitting it.

"The distance to the moon is very long," Uncle Omar said. "But a space probe can travel there."

"Everything in space is made of matter: rocks, gas, water and even us!" Laila laughed happily.

"And our Earth is unique," she said. "It has water and life." That night, Laila dreamed of the stars.
